March 17, 2020

Your Honor,

We take great pride in providing comprehensive coparenting services to families raising children between two homes. We have been working hard to meet the evolving needs of courts and families as the spread of COVID-19 (the coronavirus) continues.

At the same time, nothing is more important than the safety and wellness of the families we serve and our instructors. We have been fortunate that there has not been any reported cases of COVID-19 linked to Between Two Homes®, but based on the latest guidance from The Texas Department of State Health Services (DSHS), the Centers for Disease Control (CDC), and World Health Organization (WHO), we have made the decision to temporarily cancel live classes through the end of April to help prevent further spread of the coronavirus in our local communities.

Effective March 17, 2020 we have cancelled all live coparenting classes until further notice, with the hope classes will resume no later than May. In the meantime, respectfully we ask that you accept the certificate for our online coparenting class, "Making Two Homes Work" in lieu of the live class during this period. The online course has the same content as the live class and is based on my book, "Between Two Homes: A Coparenting Handbook."

Respectfully,
